Debate in the House of Commons on the Russo-Turnish Question.

OPINIONS OF LORDS JOHN BUSSELL AND PALMERSTON, MR. COEDEN AND OTHERS.

The following cebate took place in the House of Com-more on the 10th of August.—

On moving that the flouse, at its rising, do adjourn until Friday, Lond J Ressell, made his promised explanation respecting the state of the osegotiations on the subject of the offence between flushs and Turkey he should not enter, he said, upon the defence of the government, which had not been attacked, that House having considerablely left in the hands of the government, which had not been attacked, that House having considerablely left in the hands of the government the conduct of these negotiations. With respect to the production of papers, he had not found that it had been toward in such cases to lay papers on the table while the negotiations were still pending, nor until they were brought to some issue. He then proceeded to give an entiline of the transactions as they had occurred, without referring to occuments which were of the nature of secret papers, but glanning at incident generally known to the House and the public. When the precent government entered upon office his attention had been called to the question of the Holy Places, and he wrote to Lord Co-ley, our ambassador at Paris; but at a later period he had been informed by the flushin Minister in England, that the Emperor of Russia was satisfied with the core shou made to him upon that matter, and he felt sait the core shou made to him upon that matter, and the felt sait which of Places Amasonikoff at Castaningele, in March and to the incident between him and Pran Effect, the Furkash Minister for Foreign Affairs; to the sequent of Col Roses that the British test should proceed from Malus to the nativity of Places Amasonikoff at Castaningele, in March and the captable in Agril, he was intormed by the Turkash Minister that certain demands had been microford at that captable in Agril, he was intormed by the Turkash Minister that certain demands had been microford at the captable of Agril, he was intermed by the Turkash Minister that certain demands had been developed to the captable of the Agril of the captable with the

He desit in much detail upon the indications of design and artifice on the part of Russia in her conduct towards Servia, Walachia, and Modaria, and dencunced the proceedings of her ambassador at Constraintople. He deprecated the attempt to erect an independent Greek empire in Turkey, which, dirided as Turkey was, into antagonistical portions, would be broken up, like the Byzantine canpue, by similar causes. The very moment that Constantinople passed from the hards of the Turks, British India would be in jeopardy. Mere accurate by Russia were not enough; she should have been taken against her movements. Had she been told that if she entered the Turkish territories it would have been cansidered a cause belts, she would not have dared to cross the Fruth. Russia had row gained what she wanted she had shown that she could eater Moldavia and Wallachia wheaver she pleased with impunity, whereas those principalities ought to be made with Bessarabia, a barrier between her and Turkey. He believed that without having fired a single shot. Russia had gained advantages which would have repaid a fierce campaign, while we had lowered ourselves in the eyes of all nations. The note prepared by Austria had been jumped at by Russia; if Turkey refused the erms, we must now join Russia spinest beer, and and if Turkey, under this terrible pressure did accept them, we sactified the interference of Russia on behalf of 12 000 (200 Greeks, not Greeks by nation only, but by religions. Had the dasse been reversed. Sic J. Paramacrors complained of the shortness of the notice given by Jord John Russell, of his intention to make his atteness and make an ample apology; and nothing leas would assisty the ends of justice.

Sic J. Paramacrors complained of the shortness of the roll or given by Jord John Russell, of his intention to make his atteness; after listening to which, he said, he felt it not to be expedient neither to express any opinion as the policy of the government, or to follow the noble lord into the various tepic bound, in the interest of England, to maintain Turkey. A good deal was said about the Russian power; but hew abourd to talk of a Russian army invadiog England? Why, she could not move her forces across her own frontier without a loss. If England engaged in war, it would be attended with consequences which the present generation had not redicated upon or they would not talk so glibly about war. The government, he thought, had done wisely, for themselves as well as the country, in disregarding the taunts of thoughtless men and resisting the cry for war, and he did not blame them for sohering to the traditional policy of maintaining the integrity of Turkey.

Lord Painteston could not allow the speech of Mr. Cobden to pass without one or two observations. He had begun by talking of maintaining the independence of Turkey, and ended with endeavoring to show that Turkey was not worth defending. If he had stood there as the arowed advocate of Russia he could not have dated to pursue a course more calculated to assist her views. He had never beard a speech more full of contradictions. Mr. Cobden had forgotten the principles of free trade, of which he had been so viauouch a defender. Did he not know that the commercial system of Russia was eminently restricted and prohibitory, while that of Turkey was the most liberal of any country with which we had connuercial relations? The resources of Turkey, which were constantly improving, tended to make her commerce every year more valuable to this country. Mr. Cobden, again, was a great advocate of non interference, and what was the matter which he specially recommended to the government? What shall we do with the Turkish empire? Mr. Cobden regarded it as a rotten fabric and shought it was high time to corsider what we should do with the country when we got rid of the Mahomedans. But he (Lord Palmerston) did not agree that the Turkish empire was in a state of decay; he held its maintenance to be not only desirable but worth contending for. On the 10th inst, the Kalisch correspondent of the Austrian Lloyds wrote that, although negotiations for peace were still going on at St. Petersburg, the war de-partment was as active as ever. The troops in the camp peace were still going on at St. Petersburg, the war department was as active as ever. The troops in the camp of Pewonski, near Warsaw, are much troubled with affections of the eyes, and the cholers has again began to show theil' in the capital of Russian Poland.

The Berlin National Zeitung has a communication from Russia, dated the 12th inst., which states that the Emperor's acceptance of the Vienna proposition was not unconditional the evacuation of the Principalities was made depandent on the acceptance of the proposals by the Porte, without alteration or change. The Porte will not send off an ambassador until the order to withdraw is sent to the Russian troops. The Carr will got send that orce till the Porte has signed an arrangement which is tantamount to a concession of every point indispute; and having got so far as to be permitted to send an envoy to be. Petersburg, there will then be two questions—of indemnifications of expenses, and the expulsion of all political refugées. The former will be waived, but as to the latter, although little has been said on the point as yet, Russia will profit by this epportunity of having Turkey at a diradvan'age, to obtain a measure which the firmness of the Porte refused from Constantinopis to the St. Indicates that in an interview with Reschid Pashs, the Persian Ambassador had given full and positive assuance of the support of the Shah in case of need. The ministers of the Persian Court concur in all that has taken place, and offer themselves as Musselmen, in favor of a Museulman cause.

Measures have been taken to collect an army of sixty thousand men at Suitanish, to be placed at the disposal of the Suitan.

The government has ordered the Greek Blahops and Arch Blabeps at the capital to return to their sees in mediately, as it has been accertained that Russian and Greek agents are hard at work in various parts of the country to foment disorders and create anarchy.

MM. Pastor and Collantes, the Ministers of Finance and Public Works, had received several visits from leaders of the opposition; and both parties, it is said, were wall pleased with the result of these conferences.

The revenue during the first half of the year 1853, was $15,616,011 florins, or 3,668,449 florins more than in the first six months of 1852. The Emperor left Vienna on the 12th for Ischi, where he would remain till the end of the month. It is rumored at Vienna that, should the Russians make an inroad into Servia, the Austrians would occupy the fortress of Belgrade, for Austria would never con-ent to Russia taking possession of the key to Sclavonic and Hungarian provinces.
